LIEUTENANT AND MEMBER OF EITEL CREW MISSING

Special Agents of Department of Justice Are Making Investigation

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, June 11.—Lieutenant Brauer and certain men of the crew of the German commerce raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich, who left the ship before she was formally interned, and have not returned at the Norfolk navy yard, are believed to have left the country. Customs Collector Hamilton at treasury department.

Special agents of the department of justice are conducting an investigation at the instance of the state department, to which Collector Hamilton's report was referred. It appears that Brauer and the men were not on parole because the ship had not been interned, but Collector Hamilton understood that none of his officers or would leave the vicinity of Newport News while the status of the cruiser was in suspense.

"It has come to my attention," Collector Hamilton reported today, "that one Lieutenant Brauer, who was either the first officer or the executive officer of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich when she left the United States and is not now aboard. There is also reason to believe that Lieutenant Brauer may have other members of the crew of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich, who were aboard the ship when she arrived March 10, are not now aboard and may possibly have also left the United States with Lieutenant Brauer."

HIS STATEMENT.
"The commander of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich admits that Lieutenant Brauer is not now aboard, nor at the present time of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich's crew. He states that Lieutenant Brauer left the Prinz Eitel Friedrich soon after her arrival at Newport News, as did also any member of the crew who may not now be aboard, and asserts that since the internment of the Prinz Eitel and the giving of his written parole no officer or men have been seen from the ship."

"The commander's assertion that Lieutenant Brauer is not now aboard may not be of the crew of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich, but he is not now aboard, and while the Prinz Eitel was at Newport News, suggests two inquiries which I had with the commander of the Prinz Eitel shortly after the ship arrived at Newport News, which should be here stated."

"The commander when offered by me the privilege of landing at Newport News for any personal business, he might have ashore after having been at sea for seven months, said he could not leave his ship, asserting that this not only applied to himself, but also to his officers and men, who must remain on board."

"Two days later the commander volunteered to me the information that he had received from the proper United States naval authorities, through Rear Admiral Beatty, commanding the Norfolk navy yard, permission for his officers to go ashore at Newport News, Norfolk, Portsmouth, Old Point Comfort, Va."

"I was advised by Rear Admiral Beatty that he had transmitted permission to the commander of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich for the visit to the restricted territory of the Prinz Eitel officers, and that permission had been given for the landing of the Prinz Eitel officers, and was accompanied by a guard either from the United States navy, these guards to be furnished upon the application of the commander of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich."

"Under these conditions officers and men from the Prinz Eitel Friedrich and were ashore prior to the Prinz Eitel's internment and the giving by the commander of his written parole to Rear Admiral Beatty at the Norfolk navy yard."

FAKE GERMAN CAPTAIN.
Collector Hamilton's report, it became known unofficially, was made on May 12. No explanation was made of why it was made public at this time. It was believed, however, that cable dispatches telling of the arrest on an Italian steamer of a man said to be Captain Thierichsen, and subsequent conflicting reports that other officers of the Prinz Eitel were absent, led to its publication. Captain Thierichsen, aboard the Prinz Eitel. Third Surgeon Nole is said to be away from the ship, and an investigation is being made.

Eitel Commander Silent on Report of Hamilton

NORFOLK, Va., June 11.—Reports that Lieutenant Brauer, Third Surgeon Nole, and certain members of the crew of the Prinz Eitel Friedrich left the ship before she was formally interned at Newport News, and have not since returned to the vessel, would not be confirmed or denied today by Captain Thierichsen, of the former German raider.

When informed that an Associated Press report from Washington, containing a report from Collector of Port Hamilton stating that Lieutenant Brauer and

RAISING PINS TO OPEN CITY VACATION SCHOOLS

Location of Different Schools
Will Be Announced in Few Days

Miss Laura M. Smith, who has been named director of the vacation schools, has announced the rules under which children will be allowed to attend the schools.

With a force of clerks busily engaged Miss Smith is making preparations for the opening of the schools on Monday, June 21. The list of the school houses, where the vacation schools will be held, will be announced within a few days.

There are three rules governing the admission of children to these schools, and in substance they are as follows: All children who fail of promotion in one or more subjects, and who have a chance of making up their work will be required to attend the vacation schools, and will be notified by the school department of their assignment.

Those children, who wish to skip a grade, will be admitted on the recommendation of their principal, and they are strongly urged to attend the summer school because of the saving of time and money.

Children who have lost time through illness or other unfavorable reasons will be admitted and they are instructed to apply to the director for assignment.

Miss Smith calls special attention to the second rule as the board of education has given instruction to each child attending the vacation school and for that reason only thirty children will be assigned to one teacher.

The vacation schools will be in session from 9 a. m. until noon. Children, who failed of promotion in one or more subjects, but failed to receive notice of assignment, are instructed to report to the nearest school to their residence.

LOCAL TURN VEREIN WILL RESUME DANCES

The next regular dance will be given by the Atlanta Turn Verein at their home on Tuesday, June 15, at 12 p. m. Some time ago the entertainment committee decided to discontinue these dances during the summer months, but the demand on the part of the members of the Turn Verein has been so great that the committee was compelled to reverse its decision and agree to continue these dances throughout the year. They have been a source of pleasure to the members and their families and are always well attended.

certain men of the crew had left the ship before she was formally interned had been received in Norfolk. Captain Thierichsen asked if the report came from the United States government. When it informed it was given out by the department in Washington, Captain Thierichsen replied that he could only talk to the United States government and nothing to say to the newspapers. When asked if he had heard anything from Lieutenant Brauer or if Third Surgeon Nole had returned to the ship, Captain Thierichsen insisted that he could talk only to the government.

asked Captain Thierichsen, when asked if the report from Washington was true and that Lieutenant Brauer and the crew had left the ship and had not returned, "I can only talk to the United States government."

MR. BRYAN PLEASED BY WHAT HE CALLS NEW TONE OF PRESS

on his side—the presumptions that go with power and authority. He is your president; I am a private citizen without office or title—but one of the hundred million of inhabitants.

SYSTEMS ARE DIFFERENT. But the real issue is not between persons; it is between systems and I rely for vindication wholly upon the strength of the position taken.

Among the influences which governments employ in dealing with each other, there are two which are pre-eminent and antagonistic—force and persuasion. Force speaks with firmness and acts through the ultimatum; persuasion employs argument, courts investigation and depends upon negotiation. Force represents the old system—the system that must pass away; persuasion represents the new system—the system that has been growing, all too slowly, it is true, but growing for 1,500 years. In the old system war is the chief cornerstone—war which, at its best is little better than war at its worst, the new system contemplates a universal brotherhood established through the uplifting power of example.

If I correctly interpret the note to Germany it conforms to the standards of the old system rather than to the rules of the new, and I cheerfully admit that it is abundantly supported by precedents—precedents written in characters of blood upon almost every page of human history. Austria furnishes the most recent precedent; it was Austria's firmness that dictated the ultimatum against Serbia, which set the world at war. Every ruler now participating in this unparalleled conflict has proclaimed his desire for peace and denied responsibility for the war, and it is only charitable that we should credit all of them with good faith. They desired peace, but they sought it according to the rules of the old system. They believed that firmness would give the best assurance of the maintenance of peace and, faithfully following precedent, they went so near the fire that they were, one after another, sucked into the conflagration. Never have the faithful follies of this fatal system been so clearly revealed as now.

THE WAR IN EUROPE.

The most civilized and enlightened—aye, the most Christian of the nations of Europe—are engaged in a struggle with each other as if in a death struggle. They are sacrificing the best and bravest of their sons on the battlefield; they are converting their gardens into cemeteries and their homes into houses of mourning; they are taxing the wealth of today and laying a burden of debt on the tail of the future; they have filled the air with thunderbolts more deadly than those of Jove and they have multiplied the perils of the deep. Adding fresh fuel to the flame of hate, they have daily done new deeds of horror, until one side is endeavoring to drown non-combatant men, women and children at sea, while the other side seeks to starve non-combatant men, women and children on land. And they are so absorbed in alternate retaliations and in competitive cruelties that they seem for the time being, blind to the rights of neutrals and deaf to the appeals of humanity. A tree is known by its fruits. The war in Europe is the ripened fruit of the old system.

This is what firmness, supported by force, has done in the old world; shall we invite it to cross the Atlantic? Already the jingoes of our own country have caught the rabies from the dogs of war; shall the opponents of organized slaughter be silent while the disease spreads?

As a humble follower of the Prince of Peace, as a devoted believer in the prophecy that "they that take the sword shall perish with the sword," I beg to be counted among those who earnestly urged the adoption of a course in this matter which will leave no doubt of our government's willingness to continue negotiations with Germany until an amicable understanding is reached or at least until the stress of war is over, we can appeal from Philip drunk with carnage to Philip sobered by the memories of an historic friendship and by a recollection of the innumerable ties of kinship that bind the fatherland to the United States.

Some nation must lead the world out of the black night of war into the light of that day when "swords shall be beaten into plowshares." Why not make that honor ours? Some day—why not now? The nations will learn that enduring peace cannot be built upon fear—that good will does not grow upon the stalk of violence. Some day the nations will place their trust in love, the weapon for which there is no shield; in love, that suffereth long and is kind; in love, that is not easily provoked, that beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things, in love, which, though despised as weakness by the worshippers of Mars, abideth when all else fails.

SEEK TO SETTLE STREET CAR STRIKE IN CHICAGO Tie-Up of Every Line in City Is Threatened Today, It Is Said

(By Associated Press.) CHICAGO, June 11.—W. D. Mahon, international president of the street car union, arrived here today and took charge of the local situation, which threatens to tie up every street car and elevated line in the city. Mr. Mahon said one thing was certain, and that was that the men must be granted substantial wage advance. They have rejected arbitration in the present instance because of disappointment in the award which fixed their compensation three years ago. Mayor Thompson took a hand in the situation yesterday when employees and employers, apparently having reached a deadlock, telegraphed to Mr. Mahon to meet him here. They will confer not later than tomorrow. Mr. Mahon expected to familiarize himself with details of the union demands.

ATTORNEY GENERAL WILL DEFEND STATE AUTO LAW Savannah Case Will Be Ap- pealed to Test Constitution- ality of Law

Attorney General Grice will leave Atlanta Friday evening for Savannah, where on Saturday he will appear in the Chatham superior court in defense of the state law requiring automobile owners to register and pay a registration tax of $1 a year.

The case at issue was brought by a number of Savannah automobilists and is directed in the first instance against an ordinance passed by the city council of Savannah and which requires the registration of automobiles with the city authorities, also making compliance with the state registration law precedent to local registration.

It was this latter requirement which makes the action a test case on the state law, for the case is certain to be appealed to the state supreme court on a question of constitutionality of the state law, and in the event that court should decide with the plaintiffs that the registration fee levied by the state is in effect an additional tax on automobiles and the act is, therefore, unconstitutional, the law will, of course, be null and void and automobile owners throughout the state will be exempt from its requirements.

It was at the request of Solicitor General Walter Hartridge, of the eastern circuit, that Attorney General Grice will join with him in defending the attack on the Savannah ordinance and the state law.

JUDGE CANDLER DECLINES APPOINTMENT TO BENCH

Health Will Not Permit Accepting Stone Mountain Circuit
Judgeship

Governor Slaton has tendered the judgeship of the Stone Mountain circuit to Judge John S. Candler, of Atlanta, and Judge Candler has, on account of the condition of his health, declined it.

Although the governor has not indicated to whom he will now tender the appointment it is generally believed he may offer it to Colonel Charles Whitford Smith, the well known attorney who is one of the representatives of the Ninth ward in the Atlanta city council.

Numerous prominent citizens of counties in the Stone Mountain circuit have strongly urged Colonel Smith as the successor of the late Judge Charles S. Reid.

Judge Candler's letter to the governor declining the judgeship was in part as follows:

"On the circuit bench of this state, an upright and just judge is in position to advance, in the most efficient manner the public welfare by the firm, fair and faithful administration of the functions of his exalted office. It is, therefore, worthy of acceptance by the ablest and noblest man in the commonwealth to whom it might be offered.

"No thought of financial loss nor other selfish consideration could move me to decline an office at once so honorable and so serviceable, tendered by a life-long friend, the governor of our beloved state of Georgia, if I did not feel myself physically disqualified to undertake the heavy labors and obligations which it imposes. Two physicians under whose care my health has been for several years advise me most positively that the sedentaryness, inseparable from the work of a circuit judge, would impair my health, if not imperil my life at my age, especially in view of the bodily injuries which I sustained in a railway accident years ago of which your excellency has knowledge.

"In view of these considerations alone I feel constrained by my sense of duty to my family and by my concern that the office be filled efficiently to decline your excellency's permission to decline the undertaking of a service which probably I would be unable to perform."

COUNCIL THANKS MAYOR FOR MODERATE MESSAGE

Official Cognizance Taken of Conciliatory Attitude of Past Few Weeks

The board of aldermen Thursday afternoon took official cognizance of the board's action, saying in the course of his letter: "The entire board was pleased with the temper of your communication and the information it carried."

The board then proceeded to pass the budget, the principal item of which is an $82,000 increase for the school department. The budget will likely be signed by the mayor Friday.

The budget was signed by the mayor Friday morning, and all of the appropriations made in it are now available, which means a new impetus will probably be given street and sewer work.

The board of education is pushing its plans to erect the new buildings authorized by the budget and to do the repair work made possible by it.

This is the first time in a number of years that a finance budget has been passed and approved within such a short time.

In the message, however, the executive said he did not feel disposed to exercise his power of veto on the budget simply wanted to place himself on record.

After the paper had been read, Alderman Albert Thompson stated that he believed the mayor to be sincere in this instance, and moved that the board thank the executive for the considerate tone of his message. Alderman C. H. Kelley second the motion and it was duly and formally carried, and City Clerk Walter Taylor was instructed to furnish the mayor with a copy of the motion.

The Service First Idea

WHEN disaster cripples or destroys telephone service anywhere in the Bell system, the reconstructive power of the whole system is concentrated at that point.

Expert workmen and equipment are rushed to the scene and no pains nor expense are spared to restore the service and save the public from loss and inconvenience.

Disasters which prove ruinous to a small company are quickly repaired through the superior organization and the reserve forces which the Bell system has always ready to meet such emergencies.

Striking examples of the efficiency of the great Bell organization have been witnessed during great conflagrations. Bell telephone men are rushed to the scene on the first trains and the work of repair begins before the ashes are cold. This efficient organization is behind every Bell telephone, no matter where it may be located.

EDITORIAL: LUSITANIA'S NOTE

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, June 11.—The full text of the American note to Germany which caused Secretary Bryan to resign, follows:
The Secretary of State ad interim to the American Ambassador at Berlin:

Department of State,
Washington, June 3, 1915.
American Ambassador, Berlin.
You are instructed to deliver textually the following note to the minister of foreign affairs:
In compliance with your excellency's request, I did not fail to transmit to your government immediately upon their receipt your note of May 15, and your supplementary note of June 1, setting forth the conclusions so far as reached by the imperial German government concerning the attacks on the American steamers Cushing and Gulf-light. I am now instructed by my government to communicate the following in reply:

The government of the United States notes with gratification the full recognition by the imperial German government in discussing the cases of the Cushing and the Gulf-light, of the principle of the freedom of all parts of the open sea to neutral ships and the frank willingness of the imperial German government to acknowledge and meet its liability where the fact of attack upon neutral ships which have not been guilty of any hostile act by German aircraft or vessels of war is satisfactorily established; and the government of the United States will in due course lay before the imperial German government, as it requests full information concerning the attack on the steamer Cushing.

PRINCIPLES OF HUMANITY HAVE NOT BEEN ALTERED.

With regard to the sinking of the steamer Palmyra by which an American citizen lost his life, the government of the United States is surprised to find the imperial German government contending that an effort on the part of a merchantman to escape and secure assistance alters the obligation of the officer seeking to make capture. The government of the United States is surprised to find the imperial German government contending that the safety of the lives of those on board the merchantman, although the vessel has ceased her attempt to escape when torpedoed. These are not new circumstances. They have been in the minds of statesmen and of international jurists throughout the development of naval warfare, and the government of the United States does not understand that they have ever been held to alter the principles of humanity upon which it has insisted. Nothing but actual forcible resistance or continued efforts to escape by flight when ordered to stop for the purpose of visit on the part of the merchantman has ever been held to forfeit the lives of her passengers or crew. The government of the United States, however, does not understand that the imperial German government is seeking in this case to relieve itself of liability, but only intends to set forth the circumstances which led the commander of the submarine to allow himself to be hurried into the course which he took.

LUSITANIA NOT ARMED. GERMANY IS ASSURED.

Your excellency's note in discussing the loss of American lives resulting from the sinking of the steamship Lusitania, adverts at some length to certain information which the imperial German government has received with regard to the character and outfit of that vessel, and your excellency expresses the fear that this information may not have been brought to the attention of the government of the United States. It is stated in the note that the Lusitania was undoubtedly equipped with masked guns, supplied with trained gunners and special ammunition, transporting troops from Canada, carrying a cargo not permitted under the laws of the United States to a vessel also carrying passengers, and serving, in virtual effect, as an auxiliary to the naval forces of Great Britain.

Fortunately these are matters concerning which the government of the United States is in a position to give the imperial German government official information. Of the facts alleged in your excellency's note, if true, the government of the United States would have been bound to take official cognizance in performing its recognized duty as a neutral power and in enforcing its national laws. It was its duty to see to it that the Lusitania was not armed for offensive action; that she did not carry a cargo prohibited by the statutes of the United States; and that, if in fact, she was a naval vessel of Great Britain, she should not receive clearance as a merchantman and if performed the duty and enforced its statutes with scrupulous vigilance through its regularly constituted officials. It is able, therefore, to assure the imperial German government that it has been misinformed. If the imperial German government should deem itself to be in possession of convincing evidence that the officials of the government of the United States did not perform these duties with thoroughness, the government of the United States sincerely hopes that it will submit that evidence for consideration.

CONTENTION OF GERMANS CONSIDERED IRRELEVANT.

Whatever may be the contentions of the imperial German government regarding the carriage of contraband of war on board the Lusitania or regarding the position of that material by the torpedo, it need only be said that in the view of this government these contentions are irrelevant to the question of the legality of the methods used by the German naval authorities in sinking the vessel.

But the sinking of passenger ships involves principles of humanity which throw into the background special circumstances of detail that may be thought to affect the cases, principles which, if it is as the imperial German government will not doubt be quick to recognize and acknowledge, out of the class of ordinary subjects of diplomatic discussion or of international controversy. Whatever the other facts regarding the Lusitania, the principal fact is that a great steamer, primarily and chiefly a conveyance for passengers, and carrying more than 1,800 persons, was sunk without part or lot in the conduct of the war, was torpedoed and sunk without so much as a challenge or a warning, and that men, women and children were sent to their death in circumstances unparalleled in modern warfare. The fact that more than one hundred American citizens were among those who perished made it the duty of the government of the United States to speak of these things and once more, the solemn emphasis, to call the attention of the imperial German government to the grave responsibility which the government of the United States conceives that it has incurred in this tragic occurrence, and to the indispensable principle upon which that responsibility rests. The government of the United States is contending for something much greater than mere rights of property or privilege of commerce. It is contending for nothing less high and sacred than the rights of humanity which every government honors itself in respecting and which no government is justified in resting on behalf of those under its care and authority. Only her actual resistance to capture or refusal to stop when ordered to do so for the purpose of visit could have afforded the commander of the submarine any justification for so much as putting the lives of those on board the ship in jeopardy. This principle the government of the United States understands the explicit instructions issued on August 3, 1914, by the imperial German admiralty to its commanders at sea to have recognized and embodied, as do the naval codes of all other nations, and upon it every traveler and seaman had a right to depend. It is upon this principle of humanity as well as upon the law founded upon this principle that the United States must stand.

OFFERS GOOD OFFICES TO GERMANY.

The government of the United States is happy to observe that your excellency's note closes with the intimation that the imperial German government is willing, now as before, to accept the good offices of the United States in an attempt to come to an understanding with the government of Great Britain by which the character and conditions of the war upon the sea may be changed. The government of the United States would consider it a privilege to have the imperial German world is concerned in anything that may bring about even a partial accommodation of interests in any way mitigate the terrors of the present distressing conflict.

In the meantime whatever arrangement may happily be made between the parties to the war and whatever may, in the opinion of the imperial German government, have been the provocation or the circumstantial justification for the past acts of its commanders at sea, the government of the United States confidently looks to see the justice and humanity of the government of Germany vindicated in all cases where Americans have been wronged or their rights as neutrals violated. The government of the United States, therefore, very earnestly and very solemnly renounces the representations of its note transmitted to the imperial German government on the 10th of May, and relies in these representations upon the principles of humanity, the universally recognized understandings of international law, and the ancient friendship of the German nation.

The government of the United States cannot admit that the proclamation of a war zone from which neutral ships have been warned to keep away may be made to operate as in any degree an abbreviation of the rights either of American ship masters or of American citizens bound on lawful errands as passengers on merchant ships of belligerent nationality. It does not understand the imperial German government to question those rights. It understands it, also, to accept an established beyond question the principle that the lives of non-combatants cannot lawfully or rightfully be put in jeopardy by the capture or destruction of an unloading merchantman, and to recognize the obligation to take sufficient precaution to ascertain whether a suspected merchantman is in fact of belligerent nationality or in fact carrying contraband of war under a neutral flag. The government of the United States, therefore, deems it reasonable to expect that the imperial German government will adopt the measures necessary to put these principles into practice in respect of the safeguarding of American lives and American ships and for assurances that this will be done.

TODAY'S EVENING STORY

AS WE LIVE

(Copyright, 1915, by W. Werner.)

CLEMENCY CARTER gazed with dreary eyes from the window into the rain, which had fallen four days. All along the street the houses looked closed and lonely. No one was stirring about. Upstairs her mother was lying down with a headache. The house was still, and Clemency could neither endure it or herself.

She was struggling with her first unhappiness. It was the kind of unhappiness, moreover, that was bound, she felt, to last her life long. She had not known at first that Hugh Driscoll was the one man in the world for her; that certainly had come to her slowly. She had been almost afraid of him at first, he was so dark and grave and mature, different from any man she had known. He had come to help his cousin, Lucius Winn, in some difficult piece of law business, and as the Winn were neighbors and friends Clemency had seen much of him. So the story of her romance was told until just as it seemed about to reach the point where they lived happy ever after, Hugh finished his work and went away. That was three months ago and Clemency had since heard no word of him. She had avoided the Winn and his name in a desperate attempt to act unconcerned, but her heart ached cruelly. She could think of nothing but him day and night. She was thinking of him now as she looked out at the rain.

"He has gone and he will never come back to me," she shuddered before the thought of what life must mean without him. Then she grew brave. "Love either means grief or joy. Miss means grief, and it has come early. Yet, why should I just sit down with folded hands and give up my life to it? Other people don't do that. There's Miss Stafford. The day she became engaged her lover went to war and she never saw him again. She was reported missing. That is all she ever knew. Her hair turned white that first year, but that is all anybody has ever known of what she passed through. No one ever saw her cry, but she is still Miss Stafford. She has made her life worth while. I just feel that I must see her today. I believe I'll go over there."

Half an hour later she was lifting the old brass knocker upon the door of a tiny white house with a latticed porico. Miss Stafford came to the door. She was a slender old woman, with snowy hair and a sweet disposition. Fifty years before when an soldier went marching away she had been fresh and young and pretty.

"Why, Clemency," she cried in surprise. "My dear child! Come in. I'm that glad to see you. She kissed Clemency and drew her into the sitting room.

"Clemency started back at the sight of her. She was leaning over a chair and an umbrella leaning beside it. "You were just going out, Miss Stafford?"

"Well, what of it? I can postpone my errands for a while. It is nothing pressing, my dear—just my usual rounds. Miss Tribble, Aunt Polly Wecker, poor little June White, Miss Talbot and the rest, you know them from them for the world," Clemency said, earnestly. "They need you more than I do upon such a day."

"Go with me, then," Miss Stafford said, smiling. "The night air is so fresh and good. And you can help me carry my things," she said.

"I will," consented Clemency.

They set forth in the rain. Clemency carried a few flowers, a glass of jelly and a box of cake, and Miss Stafford was similarly laden. The first person they called upon was old Mrs. Tribble, dirty, hopeless, miserly. Clemency had always shrunk from the ugly old woman, but today she felt only a strange pity for her.

"What made her like that?" she asked Miss Stafford when they came out. "Grief, dear. She lost her three sons in one terrible epidemic and she turned to the only thing she had left to love—her money. Her soul is damned. There is but one cure for such an ail—the healing touch of Christ, but I fear she will have to stand in His presence before she will submit to it."

Aunt Polly Weaver received them next. The cake was for her. She loved good cake, but could not make it with her poor old crippled hands. Her heart was light and she laughed and told them funny stories. "Come again, pet," she begged Clemency. "I don't often see such a sweet young face as yours."

Clemency promised that she would. "What a gay old woman!" she said afterward to Miss Stafford, who looked at her curiously as she smiled. "Gay, dear? Yes, but it is the kind of gaiety that covers up a heartbreak. No woman ever had a harder life than Aunt Polly. Why, dear, in my young days she was a beauty and lived in a fine house. But her father lost his property and she made an unfortunate marriage. Her beauty faded and her hands grew crooked with hard work. When I think of what she was and see her as she is— Well, here we are at the Whites. June was reclined in her chair as usual with soft cushions easing her poor twisted back. She was older than a child. Her mother had been her. The flowers were for her. They stayed a long time with June.

When they came away Clemency kissed the girl tenderly. "Good-by, dear, I'll come again," she whispered. "Oh, Miss Stafford," she said, "I didn't know that she was like that."

Miss Stafford was silent. "I believe I'll tell you about June, Clemency," she said at last. "But you must keep it secret. She loves Dr. Fordney. He attends her, you know. And he is fond of her as he might be of a poor, unfortunate little sister. Oh, my dear, when I think of what might have been had that cruel fall not left my poor little June with an incurable spine! Next, and last, Miss Talbot, Clemency," she ended in a changed tone. So they came to the great gray house with its blind windows where haughty, cold, old Miss Talbot lived. A servant admitted them and they entered the room where Miss Talbot sat stiffly with her fine, blue-veined hands crossed in the lap of her thick silk gown. She received them with such a stately air that Clemency felt chilled until she saw how Miss Stafford acquiesced it.

"Go along with you, Eleanor," she cried. "No airs with me. Here, take your jolly—made out of apples off the tree we used to play under sixty years ago."

Clemency started up. "Oh, me!" she said, "and you are the same girl, while I—?" She spread out her delicate hands. "Trouble—trouble—trouble. You don't know what it is, Mary. Well for you that you can have your joke at my age, I can't."

"Why not? What hinders?" asked Miss Stafford, laughing at her. "What hinders?" Everything. For one thing, it's that boundary line between this property and the next. That man Hughes claims my claim. To think that after I've lived in the shade of that tree seventy years it should be claimed by a braggart little upstart of an Irish immigrant. I'll have the law on him. I've sent for the smartest lawyer in the state—the one that helped Lucius Winn, his cousin, Hugh Driscoll. He wired me he'd be here today. That's why I've got my best frock on. I'm expecting him every moment."

Clemency started up. "Oh, Miss Talbot, I must go. It is late," she mumbled. But Miss Talbot detained her imperatively. "Sit right down, child, and keep your head on. I haven't had a chance to look at you yet, and you're well worth looking at. Ah, me, you make me think of my young day. There goes the bell. My man has arrived. Now, Mr. Irishman, we'll see."

Almost before Clemency could compose herself Hugh Driscoll was in the room. He walked away with them from Miss Talbot's. When Miss Stafford told him what she and Clemency had been doing that afternoon, he turned to Clemency with a smile and deep look. "I thought," he said, "that you were one of those gold- or butterflies that only come out when the sun shines and then but to play with the delicate flowers."

"Then Clemency knew why he had gone away without speaking. He wanted to be sure that wonderful day Clemency learned two things. One was how to win his happiness, and the other was that life is given us not to be used selfishly, but to be shared by others. The cotton jacket which just touched the waist line and shows a glimpse of the blouse beneath is one of the popular summer modes. The cotton suit is adaptable to cotton novelties and ratons as well as silk or serge. Bronze pumps are not new but everybody's wearing them. They are attractive and they suit almost every occasion. The "tailored maid" in midnight blue seems to be just as popular in June as she was at Eastertime. The number news of the "midnight" dress has lightened a bit by cuffs and collars of old gold or tan—and these glowing hints, by the way, are much source for cuts and collars than white lines

GUESTS AT AL FRESCO DINNER DANCE

Miss Ellen Wright Wise, Mr. Remsen King, Miss Isoline Campbell, Mr. Wimbler Peters and Miss Lucile Kuhl.

Mr. Charles I. Ryan entertained at a beautiful dinner dance Thursday evening at the Piedmont club in compliment to Miss Ellen Wright Wise, of Richmond, Va., who is visiting Mr. and Mrs. John S. Cohen, and to his niece, Miss Lucile Kuhl.

The guests included the debutantes of the season with a number of young men.

Dinner was served at small tables arranged on the terrace and the decorations were in pink and white. White French baskets filled with pink and white sweet peas made artistic individual centerpieces and the place cards and dainty little baskets in which the wine and mint were served continued the pretty rose color motif.

Lighted Japanese lanterns were arranged in canopy effect making the scene one of artistic beauty, and a stringed orchestra rendered the dance program.

Miss Wise wore a lovely dancing frock of white chiffon and lace, and Miss Kuhl's pretty gown was of white tulle and lace with touches of old rose.

Miss Isobel Kuhl, who assisted in receiving, was gowned in white tulle and lace, and Mrs. Cohen wore white lingerie.

Other pretty gowns worn by the debutante guests were that of Miss Isobel Robinson, who wore pink tulle with touches of filmy lace.

Miss Frances Rowland, of New York, was daintily gowned in white embroidered net and lace.

Miss Mary Murphy wore blue tulle, and Miss Allie Fielder's artistic dancing gown was fashioned of pink tulle and charmeuse.

Miss Ida Winship wore old rose silk, and her guest, Miss Lettie Woolley, of New York, was gowned in white.

Miss Jeanne Noble was handsome in a gown of white embroidered net with touches of pink, and Miss Rosalie Davis wore a striking model of pale tulle and lace.

Two beautiful dancing models in all white were worn by Miss Helen McCarthy and Miss Mai Horne, and Miss Janet Hatcher was a dainty figure in blue tulle and lace.

Miss Isoline Campbell wore a becoming dress of blue and pink combined, and Miss Gladys Byrd was gowned in white tulle with soft draperies of tulle.

Miss Nellie Hood Ridley and Miss Mary Butler were lovely in pale green tulle, and Miss Marie Dinkins' dainty gown was combined blue tulle and tulle.

Miss Lydia Nash was a graceful figure wearing yellow tulle with a finish of silk lace.

Bridge Party for Miss Wise.
Miss Ellen Wright Wise, of Richmond, Va., was the honor guest at the afternoon bridge party at which Mrs. Thomas H. Morgan was hostess Friday at the home on Peachtree street.

Quantities of variegated sweet peas formed the artistic decorations of the rooms where the game was played, and the score cards were ornamented with sweet peas.

The honor guest was presented with a blue and white silk parasol and the prize for top score was silk stockings.

Marked Success Greets Comedy Presented by Habersham Players

BY ISABELLE EDMOND THOMAS.

A MID an al fresco stage setting of unusual beauty, the Habersham Players scored a triumph Thursday afternoon in the presentation of the sparkling Shakespearean comedy, "As You Like It."

Promptly at 4 o'clock a large and representative audience wended their way through a field starred with daisies to the woodland stretch adjoining the residence of Mrs. William Lawson Peel, where a veritable Forest of Arden greeted the eye.

Pine trees planted close together, fallen logs gray with lichen and a moss-grown tree stump made a picturesque setting for the players, while the afternoon sunlight of a perfect June day sifting through the green canopy of interlaced leaves illuminated the scene.

True to the custom of Shakespeare's day, preceding the prologue the company marched down the aisle and amid rounds of applause vanished through woodland paths to emerge later for their respective parts.

Act I.—In the first act, William B. Shallenberger, taking the part of the most charming of the Shakespearean characters, the gentle Celia, was greeted with enthusiasm. Mrs. Jarnett sustained her part admirably and carried her audience with her in her quick transitions from laughter to tears and by her skillful interpretation won a new place for wit.

Some Rosalind in the hearts of an Atlanta audience, Mrs. Shallenberger's Celia was a creation all grace and charm.

Mrs. Hamilton Block was lovely in her part of the coy and dainty shepherdess, Phoebe, and Miss Cleveland Zahner brought to the part of Audrey a cleverness of interpretation that drew merited applause.

Lamar Hill, in the part of "Orlando," added new triumphs to those already won in previous appearances with the Habersham club and was the recipient of many congratulations upon his skillful rendition of the part of the young lover. William Perry sustained the role of "Oliver" cleverly and Frank Smith as the "Banished Duke" won much applause.

Victor Victor brought to the difficult part of Touchstone an interpretation and a sympathy that straightaway won his audience and held them to the end. Edward Clarkson was splendid in his delineation of the character of "Adam" the faithful old servant whose devotion to his young master brought him to the point of death.

Others receiving congratulations and merited applause for clever character acting were W. C. Clarke as "Jacques Du Bois," Walter Mashburn as "Le Beau," Walter Conklin and John Harland in the parts of "Silvius and Corin." H. T. McDuffie as "Duke Frederick" and Frank Butt and Francis Pavese as first and second lords, "Amiens and Jaques" were interpreted skilfully by Richard Bold and Robert Moore. Kenyon Zahner provoked much laughter in his clever delineation of William in the scene with Audrey and "Touchstone" and the part of "Charles the Wrestler" was ably taken by James Press.

At the close of the play Miss Carolyn Cobb was tendered an ovation on the success of the comedy given under her direction, and Mrs. William Lawson Peel as the able business manager was the recipient of many congratulations.

Special credit was also given Mr. Gerard-Thiers who directed the musical numbers of the various scenes.

The Habersham Players, recently organized, will add greatly to the pleasure of the coming winter.

Back to the Village

By Edna K. Wooley

GOSH, this place looks good to me!" exclaimed an ex-small town man, whose business had compelled removal of his family to a Chicago home. "First thing I did when I got there was to board a street car and when I got beyond the business and flat districts, I got off and walked up and down the home streets, where the little houses set back from the sidewalk, with little lawns in front and gardens in the back, and a baby carriage in the corner of the porch. It looked good to me!"

"It was early enough in the morning for the duds to be out with the lawn sprinkler. I even stopped to say good-bye to one youngish fellow in his shirt sleeves and without his collar on yet—just like I used to look. "Nice day," says I. "Fine," says he, "though we need rain. Just like old times—when I had neighbors."

"None—no! I don't even have neighbors in a big town like Chicago. For that matter, people don't have homes there. They have flats. Even out in the suburb where we live, it's all flats."

"Chicago's getting to be like New York. Nobody lives in a house unless he's a millionaire, and then half the time he doesn't live in it. You don't find streets of little homes, prosperous-looking places like you do here—and the kind of people that live in 'em."

"Now, where were you living in Chicago?" he asked.

"I was among about the same class of people you find in the regular smaller town residence street. They're the same class, but they're good-looking enough to look at, but some to talk to them, they haven't got anything in common with the fellow that likes home life. And they're all dyspeptic and coming."

"You see, it's a regular whirlwind of a life—sort of chasing yourself in a circle to make the money to pay the bills that make a show so you can make more money to pay more bills to make more show, and so on. A fellow sort of judged by the front he wears up on the outside, and the amount of money he can spend having a good time."

"The women are just as bad. Say, outside of my wife, I haven't met a woman since we left here that didn't think it beneath her to roll up her sleeves and take a bath."

"I don't think any of 'em know how. But they're great for cabarets and cards, and they think we're poor, heigh-tened country folk because we like to stay home and eat home cooking without being obliged to get up between courses and do some hotfooting while the waiters match a way what we haven't had time to eat."

"Nobody's neighbors in the big town, they haven't got that sort of thing. Besides, nobody lives anywhere long enough to know anybody. Everybody's moving on all the time. It's a restlessness that's in 'em all. They can't seem to stand still, and they say nothing of being contented."

"We've got out of the city where the only one in our block of flats. Everybody loves her. We hope to have more children. But when you say anything about raising a family to any of our neighbors, they look at you frantically. They don't want children and don't intend to have any. It costs too much to live even with a capital, and they say."

"I'm not going to live in a big city all my life, you bet," he continued. "My wife and I have an ideal. Some day when we have a capital, and we don't care if people do think we're bourgeois because we're going to be living high—we're going to buy a little place in the town where my wife was born and raised. Nobody's rich there, and it doesn't take a lot of money to live respectably. And we'll have great homes, where family life and the good joys and sorrows are the main things considered. Where we can help each other and frankly hope to be wiser and nobler and richer than our fathers, where men aren't afraid to be 'slow' and to wear a high shirt and soft collar and tackle their responsibilities."

"The reason was not far to seek. In the first place, tradition held that if mayonnaise dressing curled it must be thrown out and a new mixture started, and as it often curled, this was not a cheerful prospect for a time when time was short. In the second place, tradition asserted that good mayonnaise could be made only by adding the oil drop by drop—a lengthy and troublesome process. Tradition in both instances was wrong. If the mayonnaise curdles, an egg yolk should be broken into a clean bowl and beaten thoroughly and the curdled mixture added to this. In this way the mayonnaise will be recovered."

The three-minute mixture that saves the tedious drop-by-drop process is made as follows:

Measure out the salt and mustard into a bowl and add a whole egg, both yolk and white. Beat this mixture thoroughly and then add another third of a cup of oil. This makes a fairly thick mayonnaise. If a thicker one is desired more oil must be added, making a cup of oil in all, beat until very stiff, then set the bowl on ice until the dressing is wanted.

Mayonnaise made by this process is less likely to curdle than that made in the old way, and the mixture is kept as good.

A bowl or jar of mayonnaise will keep for some time if put in the refrigerator, and it is very useful to have on hand. It is well to remember, too, that a mayonnaise can be transformed into a tartar sauce by the addition of chopped chives and capers. Therefore, it is economical in time so to plan your menu that a fish dish served with a tartar sauce is followed the next day by a salad and a vegetable.

SAFETY FIRST FOR THE BOYS AND GIRLS

Fair play is always safe play. When you punch and grapple and trip you are putting yourself in the way of danger. When you hear the word "safety" you should keep on the sidelines. It's lots of fun to run to fire, but the boy or girl whose motto is "safety" keeps at a safe distance from fire engines.

Don't this is for boys—try to break through the fire lines. You can't do any good, and you may get seriously hurt.

Don't—here's another one for boys—use a slingshot. Slingshots in the hands of careless boys cost many people their eyesight.

Don't play with matches.

Don't light fires in the yard unless some person is with you.

Sammy Jay Does a Little Talking

By THORSTON W. BURGESS

(Copyright, 1915, by A. G. Lapham.)

If sound advice was always heeded it would not be so often needed. This is especially true of young folks. You see they don't like to own up that they don't know as much as they think they do. And this is a very great mistake, a very great mistake indeed.

When Sammy Jay watched old Granny Fox trot off down the lone little path out of sight he was sorely tempted to follow her. He knew perfectly well that she had some plan in that shrewd head of hers for catching those three little Possums, Bumpy, Frumpy, and Grumpy. Old Granny Fox was not one to give up easily. She was very sharp and very clever. She has to be in order to live. He had upset one plan. There wasn't a doubt in his mind that but for his timely warning at least one and perhaps all three of those little children of Old Billy Possum would be by this time inside of old Granny Fox. Instead of safe up in the tree from which Granny had tried to entice them with the promise to show them the wonderful things to be seen in the Great World.

And Sammy also knew that Bumpy, Frumpy, and Grumpy were not a bit thankful for what he had done because of the smooth tongue of old Granny Fox, and the fact that they had much rather believe what she said than what he said. You know it is a great deal easier to believe things you want to believe than things you don't want to believe. So Sammy had half a mind to leave the three little Possums to find out by experience that his warning was for their good. But when he thought of what a sad experience it might be decided to stay and help them. Then he would have done his duty by Old Billy's youngsters and if anything happened to them it would be no fault of his.

"So as soon as Granny Fox was out of sight Sammy cleared his throat and began. "I know just what you are thinking, old Granny Fox. You know it is a great deal easier to believe things you want to believe than things you don't want to believe. So Sammy had half a mind to leave the three little Possums to find out by experience that his warning was for their good. But when he thought of what a sad experience it might be decided to stay and help them. Then he would have done his duty by Old Billy's youngsters and if anything happened to them it would be no fault of his."

Fashions for Americans

By Lillian E. Young

Such a lovely lacy confection is this dainty summer evening frock made up of chintilly lace and palest pink taffeta. Graceful, quaint and charming, it is in every way suited to a youthful wearer, and expresses unusual distinction in its lines and fashioning.

The taffeta blouse is cut by a kimono-sleeved pattern, to acquire the sleeve tops cut in one with the body. The length is then completed in lace. A line of shirring from the bust line down through the center of the front, gives a very pretty effect of drapery at the sides, and forms a giraffe in one with the blouse itself. A Model neck frill wired to stand up in back finishes the V-neck in as dainty way as possible.

Very real one-piece boning is used for the gathering underskirts, and can have plain top where it is covered by the tunic.

Consistent with the quaint lines of the bodice is the paneled tunic skirt, which, in its fashioning, expresses a happy combination of a bygone style with the present day. The bouffancy at the sides must not be pronounced, in fact, it is only suggestive of bouffancy for the draping is kept very simple, and is more a natural result of the gathering about the waist than any more complicated device. In front and back the material is cut out about even with the hip line and runs up to a shallow point at the center.

The lace ruffle is then applied very full about the edge with an inch heading above the gathering and is used for about even with the hip line and runs up to a shallow point at the center.

With the transparent skirts, net petticoats are found most satisfactory, and they can be trimmed as high as the knees with narrow self-ruffles to make them a bit more opaque.

In orchid, white, pistachio, green, maize, saffron, turquoise, and other colors, this design can be most charmingly worked out in taffeta or satin, and even crepe de chine. Taffeta will, however, prove the best in the end, since it incorporates the little stiffness required for this particular model. For the same reason chintilly lace is preferable to shadow, the latter being inclined to droop.

Braised cutlets served cold is an English dish that will find favor with many in hot weather.

Cut and trim the cutlets, and place them in a baking dish with the fat and trimmings and a small piece of onion, a carrot and a little turnip. Cover the dish and braise gently in the oven or on top of the stove for half an hour.

When done, place the cutlets between two plates, till cold, then arrange them in the center of a platter and surround them with a Ring of anchovy made of cold sliced vegetables, carrots, potatoes, beets and peas dressed with mayonnaise.

For steamed kidneys, wash and skin the kidneys and rub them in flour. Heat a little fat in a casserole, put in the kidneys and fry them brown. Then take them out and set them aside. In the same fat, add a little onion, and a little water, and return the kidneys to the casserole. Simmer for about an hour, then remove from the dish and add one tablespoon of sherry. Serve surrounded by ring of rice.

Calves' brain croquettes. Roll the brains for twenty minutes with half a teaspoon of salt, one tablespoon of lemon juice, and a little onion.

Put a rubber nipple on the bluing bottle and you can gauge perfectly the amount of bluing needed.

Advice to June Brides

BY MADAME SCHUMANN-HEINK

The Famous Contralto

"TUT!" I hear some young girl say who is about to marry. "The last girl from the cradle to be spoiled, I'll be a spoiled girl just as soon as possible—if I have any; but my mother did not let me be a spoiled girl. I have been taught that when a woman is looking for a wife to be married to, she is not looking for a child's nurse, nor a housekeeper, nor even a healthy woman to feed her child. I love the man I am going to marry devotedly and I know he loves me—we are unhappy out of each other's sight. Surely there is no possibility that we who love each other so unutterably will not be happy when we are made one in reality as we are now in mind and heart."

My dear girl you have started from the wrong premises. It is a human impossibility for two people to be "one in mind and heart." To be so they must have the same tastes, the same desires, the same ambitions, the same hopes, the same pride, the same prejudice and exactly the same viewpoint and standpoint in life.

They must have been born with the same temperament, bred in the same environment and educated along the same lines.

You can see that all this is an impossibility. But each couple who marries must adjust these differences in fundamentals and right here it is a good place for me to say that a successful marriage is like a successful political alliance—a series of compromises.

We can gain some things by giving up others, and the first thing in a successful wife should learn is that the little things don't count much.

Whether you go to a musical comedy or grand opera, don't fight about light bulbs because most of you can go to the musical comedy with your husband at night, if that is the one he prefers, and to a grand opera matinee in the afternoon by yourself.

But whether your children shall be given the proper education or allowed to leave school too soon is a thing to fight about provided you have and are on the side of the education.

You see my point. Use tact, be just, fair, but stand by your principles. For without doing all these you may lose your husband devotedly and still be an unsuccessful wife.

TODAY'S HOUSEHOLD AFFAIRS

IN hot weather heavy meats and stews, where to do without the appetizing light meat dishes are a welcome change.

For those who like veal, a cream of veal makes a more appetizing summer dish than the roast.

Scrap and pound into small pieces one pound of veal tenderloin, add an equal amount of bread crumbs moistened with milk, the yolk of one egg, the beaten whites of two eggs and enough milk to make a paste. Stir this mixture well, season and pour into a buttered mold. Steam it like a custard for one hour, and serve with a white cream sauce.

Braised cutlets served cold is an English dish that will find favor with many in hot weather.

Cut and trim the cutlets, and place them in a baking dish with the fat and trimmings and a small piece of onion, a carrot and a little turnip. Cover the dish and braise gently in the oven or on top of the stove for half an hour.

Hot Weather Food

FAUST Spaghetti is an ideal hot weather food, because while it is highly nutritious, it is non-heating and very easy to digest. Besides, it is easy to prepare. Don't spend half your time working over a hot range these summer days. A whole Faust Spaghetti meal, costing 10c, can be prepared in twenty minutes. Write for free recipe book.

THEATERS

Jack Wilson, Kitty Gordon and Frank Markley are features of the vaudeville program at the Forsyth theater. Large audiences have attended each performance this week, and the engagement of Kitty Gordon proved a success. Miss Gordon, in her presentation of "Jack Gordon's dramatic novelty, 'The Return of Alma,'" written especially for her, is supported by a commendable cast. Jack Wilson is funnier than ever. All Atlanta remembers his previous appearances when he created riots of laughter.

"Brother Officers," an astonishingly realistic drama of love and war, staged in London, where unparalleled war scenes were photographed, is the offering at the Grand theater tomorrow in five reels. The leading role is portrayed by the eminent English artist of both stage and film, Henry Arden, who is as widely known and favored in America as his native shores. The picture was produced under the personal supervision of the noted Harold Shaw, England's most noteworthy director of photoplays, and, when shown at the Strand theater in New York recently, created a great success.

The Strand presents today the four-part Mutual Master Picture, "The Patriot and the Spy," with Marguerite Snow and James Cruise in leading parts. It tells a way story with human and compelling fidelity. It lays emphasis not on the thrilling and material side of the great game of hate, but on the side nearer home.

Miss Snow is once more to the fore as the heroine in this picture. The leading part is entrusted to her to interpret. Her many admirers will find her here in a role that calls forth the most appealing side of her versatile nature.

Tomorrow, Mae Marsh, in "Her Shattered Idol," will be the attraction.

State Senator Eliot DeWitt Pickett, of Dawson, representatives of the Eleventh district in the 1915-16 general assembly, was in Atlanta a few hours Friday. He is on his way to Washington and other eastern cities to attend to matters of business which, he says, he will conclude before the meeting of the legislature on Wednesday, June 23. While in Atlanta Senator Pickett called on Governor Stanton and other state house officials. The senator elect has served several terms in the legislature as the representative from Terrell county and he has made a wide circle of friends among the lawmakers and other prominent in state affairs.
